> 67-The Father of the writer of the followinsult offered to the North by and through it, ing ranged these western wilds before the defeat of the Indians at the great Kanawa by Gen. Lewis.

My Father ranged the wilderness Where the wild beast did cry; Logan was an Indian chief. His dwelling was hard by.

Logan was a man of worth, And of the Mingo tribe, In war or peace he sallied forth, But Logan took no bribe.

The Fort it trembled once with fear; Two of my kinemen fell, The rifles cracked and sounded far, Se did the savage yell

Logan; he was all for peace He lead his warlike train, He marked the prisoners keen distress And cut the captives chain.

But cruel was my countrymen, All in an angry mood, They sought his wandering family, And recklessly spilt their blood.

I yet can see the gallant chief, As he indignant stands, His soul all smothering in grief, The hatchet in his hands.

Many were the victims That fell beneath his arm. Unti! his soul, it sickened; He said: "I will not harm."

Then gazing on the cloud, Which then obscured the sun, With feeling nobly proud, He said: "My work is done." JOHN HULSE.

Dr. John Mingo, of the city of Richmond, though a regular physician; and of course opposed to what he called quack medicines, was obliged to say that its good effects in the case of Mr. Ramsey, were wonderful indeed.

He had been given up by several physicians; had tried most of the quack medicines, and was on the verge of despair, as well as the grave, when he tried Carter's Spanish Mixture.

We refer the public to his foll and lengthy certaineste around the bottle, stating his cure.
